

Here To Help

When a grandparent or relative assumes care of a child, it can be a challenging experience emotionally, legally and financially. The needs of each grandparent or relative caring for a child vary from one to the next, and children may also experience emotional or behavioral issues that require support. The Caregiver Support Program takes this into consideration when determining what services can be provided so a family can be successful.

Raising Children

Grandparents & Older Relatives Raising Grandchildren

In Pennsylvania, there are nearly 200,000 children living in households headed by grandparents or other relatives who are responsible for meeting the basic needs of these children due to instances of abuse, neglect, incarceration, divorce, domestic violence, substance abuse, illness, death, economic hardship, and other family or community crises involving parents.

The Caregiver Support Program offers aid through the Pennsylvania Department of Aging to families who find themselves in a kinship care situation. The Franklin County Area Agency on Aging can offer support and services to families who meet the criteria for the program.

Benefits & Support Available For Caregivers

The Caregiver Support Program provides a variety of services, including:
